

Proposed DRS default transfer process

We are proposing that in undefended DRS cases, the complainant should have the right to a transfer of the domain name registration on payment of a fee of £200 (plus VAT).
Please read our consultation paper for full details of this proposed default transfer process and then answer the questions below.

This document contains respondents between 4 and 4 inclusive.

1. What do you think about our proposal for a default transfer process?

- I agree with the proposal
- I don't mind one way or the other
- I disagree with the proposal

2. Please give your reasons for why you feel this way about the proposal

Under the current DRS complainants have to prove their case, finding someone "guilty" by default and awarding a name to a complainant, however ridiculous or frivolous that complaint may be would be a massive mistake (to put it politely).

Savvy domain investors and companies will exploit this system for all it's worth.

Finally, if you do decide to implement this, may I suggest that the £200 raised be not put towards further dismantlement of the DRS service, but donated to a good cause such as the RSPCA or similar.

3. Please give us your contact details
