

Proposed DRS default transfer process

We are proposing that in undefended DRS cases, the complainant should have the right to a transfer of the domain name registration on payment of a fee of £200 (plus VAT).
Please read our consultation paper for full details of this proposed default transfer process and then answer the questions below.

This document contains respondents between 80 and 80 inclusive.

1. What do you think about our proposal for a default transfer process?

- I agree with the proposal
- I don't mind one way or the other
- I disagree with the proposal

2. Please give your reasons for why you feel this way about the proposal

This is silly and will take the time up of the experts who will have to separate the genuine DRS actions from the ones who are just trying to obtain a valued domain name on the cheap.

I am in the armed forces, how will you deal with my domain names when I'm away for 6 months. You are basically saying that if anyone has a claim at my names and I can't reply because of operational reasons, I lose my name.

This is very silly indeed, it's proposed by people who missed out on buying domain names early on and have to pay a higher price if they want a good one. Well I feel like that sometimes but that's life.
