

Proposed DRS default transfer process

We are proposing that in undefended DRS cases, the complainant should have the right to a transfer of the domain name registration on payment of a fee of £200 (plus VAT).
Please read our consultation paper for full details of this proposed default transfer process and then answer the questions below.

This document contains respondents between 126 and 126 inclusive.

1. What do you think about our proposal for a default transfer process?

- I agree with the proposal
- I don't mind one way or the other
- I disagree with the proposal

2. Please give your reasons for why you feel this way about the proposal given the state of nominet communications systems, and the fact that you deem something to have been recieved just because you put it into the post office, considering how many transfer forms have to be resent to you over and over again as they seem to vanish. At the very least you could send these via registered mail and get a signature, then at least you could say with certainty some body has actually defaulted rather than royal mail binning the DRS.

It seem unfair that a domain owner could loose their business over a communication problem.
