

Hi

My suggestion would be to make the DRS completely separate from Nominet.

I think there risk of conflict of interest by having the Registry operating the dispute resolution process. I also don't see any reason why dispute resolution should _have_ to be operated by the Registry. The more independence the better.

On fees I support option 2.

I would like to see some kind of rotation or re-assessment of 'experts' as undoubtably their careers and interest in the domain name world will change over time - it shouldn't be a 'job for life'

Regards
Rex Wickham