

- 2) Yes
- 3) Yes
- 4) 3
- 5) It's not a duplicate at the moment. It would be if anyone could register.
- 6) In general someone who provides email and webhosting services.
For net.uk domains, anyone with a Nominet tag.
- 7) A telco providing bandwidth and IP address allocation (RIPE, etc.).
- 8) There are sufficient differences, but the domain should be open to both ISPs and Network providers.
- 9) b. .net.uk should be only be for anyone with a Nominet tag.
- 10) See 9)
- 11) Only so far as being a tag holder
- 12) .net.uk domains should not be used for customer email addresses.
They can be used for registrant addresses (e.g. support@precedence.net.uk) and for names of servers (e.g. pop3.precedence.net.uk)
- 13) Yes, most people would register duplicates. It would not grow the namespace.

Dr. Stephen Borrill, Director and Systems Architect
Precedence Technologies Ltd