

I think Nominet should be providing a significantly higher level of technical support to new and small registrars. In the long run this would I believe reduce the need for daily draw on your technical resources from befuddled tag holders. I also think the whois/DAC changes et.c. have been badly handled and to the detriment of the less technically gifted, essentially cutting some of us off from data sources we need access to to remain competitive. Quite inconsiderate and a clear bias towards the domain name 'establishment'; anti-competitive and anti-entrepreneurial.

Sincere regards
