

As to the proposals; having read them I am struck with the realisation that Nominet wishes to fall in to the trap of offering services in competition with its members. This is wholly unacceptable; Nominet should be working for its members and the UK Internet community, not competing with them. Any option involving consultancy services should therefore not be considered.